Data Privacy Laws

The emergence of data protection laws come from the right to privacy which is a fundamental right guaranteed under Articles 14, 19, and 21 of the Constitution of India.
Data Protection aims to protect all types of sensitive data at both individual and corporate levels. While for corporates, sensitive data constitutes of financial data, internal management documents and policies, marketing and business strategies, client information, various associations, IPRs, etc., whereas for individuals sensitive data would comprise of personal data like biometric data, information related to identity, health information, financial data, IPRs etc. which requires protection from any misuse or mishandling and ensuring the right to privacy.
With the digitalisation of almost all the areas of work, data privacy has become an imminent need and so as to secure the interest of public and protect the data, various laws have been framed and enforced in India which includes:
a. The Information Technology Act, 2000;
b. Information Technology (Reasonable Security Practices and Procedures and Sensitive Personal Data or Information) Rules, 2011;
c. Digital Personal Data Protection, 2023;
d. General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) Compliance.

We offer services like drafting and execution of Non-Disclosure Agreements to combat this issue for private individuals and corporates while adhering to the laws, rules and guidelines stated in the abovementioned Laws.
